

Penny Carnival Date Postponed

It isn't often that your local columnist has the opportunity to win a "scoop" from Winchell in announcing a "blessed event" of celebrity, but this week I can and do!

We are most happy to announce the birth of seven little holidays to Mary Christmas, that curly haired dusky little darling who has been the center of attraction at the Green Haven Inn, Montague's famous night-spot, where there is no cover charge, and the food is as fresh as most.

Mary Christmas was a unique addition to this haven of merriment and mustard covered edibles. And despite the fact she was no hot number on the dance floor nor a singer of note, her easy going, happy-go-lucky nature soon won her the favor of all of the eligible young swains—and many of the older ones—who frequented the place. And, unlike most of the female entertainers of such a place, her womanly ways even won for her the friendships of the women guests. Aye, she was an attraction to the dump.

Yep, she was a popular one, that minx, and a bit of a flirt indeed. She soon learned that a roll-of-any-eyes paid dividends, and was not adverse to a bit of snuggling or a pat on the head. But she was a country gal at heart, and like most of them, a sample of the gay night life only serves to start them off on a merry road, which leads down to disillusion and disgrace. Fired by a compelling desire to see life, the local conditions and loyal friends became too tame for fast-stepping Mary, and against the advice of her true friends she started going about with a faster crowd, which included traveling men and pugs. Then, as always, when they tired of her, poor Mary returned home, a sad but wiser girl, only to find her true friends ready to welcome her even in disgrace.

Thus ends a chapter in the life of this black curly haired Cockerel Spaniel!

I passed up a good one last week when I failed to tell our readers about young George Mason and Buster Hinman tipping over in their canoe while playing pirates on White River. It would have made a good feature—especially if I could have found words to describe the way Buster Hinman looked as he clung to a piling waiting for rescue, as told by Skipper Mason, who, of course failed to describe his own predicament.

But it's too late to tell you about it now, so we won't try. Anyway, the fact that this pair was all wet on a given day probably would not be such surprising news after all.

— memos —

We understand that our young soldier friend, Harry Wissman, darn near got run over in camp the other day.

His company was taking a hike and Harry was acting as guide, and was up front. They had been walking for some time and Harry started thinking how nice it would be to rest for awhile. Just about that time the officer bellowed out a command, and Harry, thinking his hopes had come true, stopped walking. After about fifty pair of army shoes stepped on his neck, as he lay face down in the mud, Harry figured out that the officer had called for "double time" instead of "halt."

The officer evidently didn't care for Harry's theory on the "power of suggestion" for he placed another man up front as guide for the rest of the trip.

"There's more to this army life than we thought!" Harry says.

— memos —

President Roosevelt may be doing great things with the defense program by drafting all of the young men, but he's raising hell with Montague's progress program by taking all of the good workers. If he keeps on, some of our older men will have to lay aside their carpet slippers and roll up their sleeves and place themselves on call for extra work.

— memos —

Any sportsmen who spends a dollar at the stag party, tomorrow eve, can do so with the satisfaction that it will be used for a good cause, inasmuch as all profits will be used for bird propagation.

— memos —

That's all—and as they say in the movies, anything above which bears a resemblance to facts or sensibleness is unintentional and purely coincidental.

TO REORGANIZE MONTAGUE HOME ECONOMICS KITCHENS

The Montague Board of Education approved plans for reorganizing the home economics department to qualify it under the requirements of the State Vocational Board of Control.

Next year the Home Economics and second grade will switch rooms and the room will be equipped with two new stoves, either electric or gas, an electric refrigerator and new serving tables. The room will be divided into the home living area and the food preparation department.

These changes were recommended by a representative of the state department, and will allow for more state and federal aid under the Smith-Hughes law.

Essay Contest to End, April 23rd

Pupils of the Montague and Whitehall schools, who plan to participate in the "Land of Liberty" essay contest, which is being sponsored by manager Howard Carter, of the Playhouse Theatre, are urged to submit their writings to the superintendents of their respective schools, on or before Wednesday, April 23, in order to be eligible for the $10 cash prizes.

In connection with the showing of the very timely picture, "Land of Liberty," on Friday and Saturday, April 25 and 26, Mr. Carter is offering $5 to the pupil of each school who writes the best theme on: "Why I'm Proud to be an American." The only qualification for participation is that the entries must be pupils of one of our local schools. Winners will be announced from the stage on Saturday.

The picture, based on historic incidents in the growth of our nation during the past 150 years, has been acclaimed one of the greatest stories ever filmed. Woven into a closely-knit story, the film was produced jointly by all of the leading film companies, and characters are depicted by 150 of the screen's leading actors and actresses.

It is a timely subject, and one that will stir your pride in being an American. We strongly advise all to see it.

Local Girl Weds Muskegon Man

A wedding service was solemnized Monday at the St. James Catholic church, when Miss Bernadine Schepman of this city became the bride of Charles Cihak Jr., of Muskegon. Fr. R. W. Passeno, pastor of the local church, read the service.

The young couple was attended by Oakland Senf of Fremont, and Miss Henrietta Schepman, sister of the bride.

The bride wore an azure blue costume suit with full length fitted coat, and navy accessories. Her maid of honor was attired in dusty rose with a long fitted coat and navy accessories. The bride carried a bouquet of gardenias, while her attendant wore a corsage of pink roses and sweet peas.

Following the ceremony a reception was given at the home of the bride's parents for the immediate families, with Mr. and Mrs. C. Gendron of Chicago as the only out-of-town guest.

Mr. and Mrs. Cihak will make their home in Mt. Pleasant, where Mr. Cihak holds a position as bank accountant.

Junior Chamber Meets Monday

The Montague Junior Chamber of Commerce will meet next Monday evening at the Green Haven for the regular April meeting, with dinner at 7:00 o'clock sharp.

President George Dillabaugh asks that all members who are able, be present, as there are several matters to be considered which deserve attention. Mr. Dillabaugh points out that several of the active members have been called in the draft, and that others are working nights, thus reducing the list of active workers considerably.

"It is up to the young men who remain unhampered by definite obligations to 'close ranks' and carry on the work we have started. Surely, if some of our members can give a year of their time for national defense at low pay, those of us who remain can hold up our end by keeping our civic program from bogging down," President Dillabaugh declared.

Among other things to come before the meeting will be further discussion of the mid-summer celebration, which will be sponsored jointly by the Junior Chamber and the Sport Club.

August Peterson, 68 years old, who has been making his home at the Green Haven the past few months, was taken to Hackley hospital this afternoon, after suffering a severe stroke. His condition is reported to be critical.

Kite Fliers Urged to Observe Caution

The coming of spring brings the advent of the kite season, and because of some hazards in this sport, the Michigan Public Service Company is joining other electric, telephone and telegraph companies throughout the country in warning children to keep their kites away from overhead lines. Mr. C. M. Reed, Safety Director for the Company, suggests that observance of the following simple safety rules will avoid all possible dangers to children.

Kites should be flown in open spaces where there are no electric wires. It should be remembered that the kite string is at an angle and may pass over electric lines a long distance away.

If kites become entangled with an electric line, children should make no attempt to remove it, or to climb a pole to regain it. Call the electric or telephone companies and linemen with proper equipment will remove it.

It is unsafe for children to pull down a kite from electric lines, because in so doing the wires may be pulled together, causing a short circuit, or a wire may break and cause injury to anyone near it.

Kites should never have wire or metal frames. Metal or metallized cord should never be used, as they are conductors of electric current. It is important that kite string be kept off damp ground as a wet string also becomes a conductor of electricity.

Kite flying is a fine sport and is entirely safe for children when they fly a properly made kite in an open space away from electric wires. The observance of these few safety suggestions will not detract from the fun and may prevent accidents.

The Anaconda Bowling girls honored Miss Lillian Wilkinson, of this city, at a dinner in the Blue Room of Demos Cafe, last Wednesday night. The event was to celebrate the coming marriage of Miss Wilkinson to Walter Simo of Muskegon, which will take place Saturday. Miss Wilkinson was also honored recently at a party given by Mr. and Mrs. Otto Meeske, Lake Shore Drive, Muskegon.

Violet Ray Chalk

A method has been developed to treat ordinary chalk with ultra-violet rays so that the chalk, as well as the writing on the blackboard is clearly visible in darkened lecture rooms.

Troughton New V. F. W. Leader

Louis A. Troughton, well known local resident, was elected Commander of the White Lake Veterans of Foreign Wars, last evening, to succeed Marcus Dahl.

Other officers elected at that time included Senior Vice Commander, Marcus Dahl; Junior Vice Commander, Ray Huston; Quartermaster, Wm. Wentworth; Chaplain, Albert Neils; and Surgeon, Francis Matson. George Fehrenbach was elected Trustee.

The new commander will make the various new appointments at the next meeting. No date has been set as yet for installation.

DAUGHTER OF CLAYBANKS SUPERVISOR MARRIED, SAT.

Miss Helen Esther Graham, daughter of Supervisor and Mrs. William Graham of Claybanks, and LaVern Francis Reed, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Reed of Pentwater, were wed last Saturday evening in the Hart Methodist church. They were attended by Mr. and Mrs. John Hatfield of Hart.

The bride, a graduate of the local High School, class of '40, was attired in a navy blue suit with harmonizing accessories and wore a corsage of gardenias.

The young couple will make their home in Muskegon Heights, where Mr. Reed is employed.

Large Attendance Expected At Stag

Based on a tentative sale of tickets the committee in charge of the White Lake Sportsmen's Club stag party, to be held at the club house this Friday night, estimate that the affair will be attended by approximately 175 sportsmen from this community and Muskegon. The party is being sponsored jointly by the local group and the recently formed Muskegon club, as a get-acquainted meeting for members.

The program will offer instrumental and vocal entertainment; games of skill, cards, and refreshments, in addition to sound movies on bird propagation and trout fishing.

During the evening several pieces of quality fishing equipment will be presented to some lucky members including a new type $7.50 fly rod.

Admission is 50c, with tickets being exchanged at door for trade coupons, good for refreshments and games. Proceeds will be divided between the two groups and will be used for conservation projects.

All men are invited, whether they are members or not.

ASSIGNED TO DESTROYER

Lyle Lipka, who returned to the Great Lakes Naval Training Station last week, after a visit here, has been assigned to active duty aboard the destroyer Manley, stationed at Mare Island, California.

Dick Hill, son of Dr. and Mrs. Wallace Hill, who is serving his first stretch in the navy, recently returned from Hawaii and is also now stationed at Mare Island, aboard the U. S. S. Astoria.

Maybe the lads will meet.

Three Seaver Girls are Rural Teachers

The Misses Helen June, Doris and Lois Seaver, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Seaver of Claybanks, received mention last week in the Muskegon Chronicle, because of the fact that all three of the girls are devoting their talents to education. It is unusual, to say the least, to find three school teachers in one family, but it is still more surprising to find three sisters teaching in a radius of eight miles.

All three girls are graduates of the Montague High School and received early training in the Green school, Claybanks. Doris and Lois, who are twins, graduated from the Oceana County Normal at Hart in 1939 and have been teaching since that time. Helen June will graduate from the Normal this spring.

Doris, who taught the Gee school for two years, will take charge of the Ryerson school next year. Lois will return to the Bunce school for a third term, and Helen June will teach at the McCallum school. All three schools are within a distance of eight miles of one another.

Whitehall Pioneer Businessman Dies

Funeral services were held this afternoon in Whitehall for Charles F. Tornblom, 81 years old and one of White Lake's pioneers, who died Monday in a Greenville hospital following a six weeks' illness. He had been spending a few weeks in that city with his son, Carl.

Services were held from the Covell Chapel, with Rev. Lloyd Mead of the Whitehall Methodist church in charge. During the services stores in Whitehall suspended business in his honor. Interment was made in the Whitehall cemetery.

Mr. Tornblom was born in Sadermanland, Sweden, Feb. 11, 1860 and came to Whitehall in 1880. He was owner and operator of the Troy Laundry from 1888 to 1931, when he sold the business to the George Gaeahls and retired. Mrs. Tornblom died 10 years ago.

Surviving are: one son, Carl, of Greenville; one daughter, Mrs. Edmond Quackenbush, Whitehall; one brother, August, and a sister, Augusta, both of Whitehall; two grandchildren, and one great-grandchild.

Sportsmen Asked To Work Sunday

An SOS is being broadcast by the Propagation Committee of the White Lake Sportsmen's Club to all interested sportsmen of the area, to be on hand Sunday morning to help put the finishing touches on the club's game farm, in order that all work may be completed before trout season opens.

To date, posts have been set and the lower wire strung for the two-lot enclosure, and the frameworks for the two brooder houses have been erected. There still remains to be done quite a bit of work, including the stretching of the top wire of the big pen, filling around the lower wire, siding and roofing the brooders, and other minor work, preparatory to placing the birds there. All of this must be completed within the next two weeks, as some of the hens have already begun to lay.

When completed, and in operation, the game farm should provide quite an attraction for motorists passing through Montague. Located as it is on the main highway, it will be in plain view of all south or north-bound traffic, and when one considers the fact that many have never had the opportunity to see this game bird close at hand, or to see the young pheasant chicks, it is quite certain that there will be no lack of transient interest.

Come on out Sunday, fellows, and let's get the job done before other activities interfere.

The Strumpet Sea

Peter said, angrily resenting her refusal to accept his word: "Don't talk like a fool. I tell you he's dead!" Why should Peter be angry because she could not believe this impossible thing?

She forced herself to listen to what Peter said when he now began to relate what had happened, telling George, while the others listened. Peter said they came out at last on an open hillside grown with berry bushes. They saw the pond on the saddle of the ridge and a great flock of geese in the pond.

"I would have to crawl to get near enough to shoot," Peter said, explaining to them as they listened without speech, Isaiah and Hiram in the door with Corkran behind them, George and Mary at the table. Tommy Hanline had come to stand behind Peter, tears streaking his cheeks.

Peter went on with his story of his brother's death.

"I'd have to crawl," he said, "on my hands and knees. Richard and Gee stayed where they were, so's not to scare the birds. I crawled within shot range and waited till they lined up good, and shot. Some were dead, and some of them flapping on the water. The others flew away."

"I stood up and yelled, and Gee came running. We chased the wounded geese in the shallow water, and caught some, till we had eight."

"Then I asked Gee where Richard was. He said Richard had gone down to the beach. I went along the top of the cliff looking for him, and finally I saw him. There was a point of rocks running out into the water, and he was sneaking toward the point as if he was trying to cut something off from the water. I thought it might be seals, but I couldn't see them."

"I saw him start to run, and then I saw them coming toward the water, galloping on their flippers the way they do; but they were sea lions, bigger than seals, some of them ten or twelve feet long. Dick got in the way of them and he hit at one with his club. It snapped at him. I was too far away to see just what happened, but they have long tusks, teeth like a dog's, only longer. It must have sunk the tusks into his hand; and it just galloped on, dragging Richard with it, into the water."

"I think one of the tusks stuck in his wrist somehow; maybe wedged between the bones, or hooked into the tendons. He was jerked off his feet, couldn't do anything. It dragged him into the water, and they went under together. The place was boiling with them, dozens of them, like a school of mackerel. They churned it into foam like milk. Even from up where I was, I couldn't see down into it."

"I stayed there, running up and down the beach, shouting and yelling like a crazy man, but I never saw him again."

CHAPTER XVII

"He can't be," Mary realized she had spoken aloud, for their eyes turned to her. "Richard can't be dead, Peter."

He stood up angrily. "I tell you he is."

"We can go back and find him. Please!"

Peter's face darkened, but he spoke without heat, understandingly. "I'm sorry, Mary. I know how you always felt about Richard. But I feel worse than anyone. He was my brother, wasn't he?" He looked around at them all; he cried, as if their eyes accused him: "Blast it, I couldn't do anything! I tell you he's dead!" No one spoke. He came to his feet, strongly. "I want to get away from here. This easterly's what we need to get out of the Bay. We might not get another for weeks. We're leaving!"

No one denied him. Peter said, his tone placating: "Corkran, come on deck. I want a word with you." Without waiting for an assent, he turned abruptly into the after cabin. Corkran went through the steerage to ascend the companion ladder there.

George put off Richard's coat that Tommy had given him and went to his bunk to lie under blankets there. She followed him, her legs stiff and wooden with the penetrating damp and chill. Standing by the bunk she could see through the small window above it a headland a mile away. She watched the headland fall slowly behind; and she felt the heavier seas outside the Bay begin to lift the Venture. She stood there long, not moving, her eyes fixed on that bluff which was gray through rain; till presently they changed course, brought the wind more abeam, and the headland disappeared.

When Mary came into the main cabin that night, Peter sat in Richard's place at the head of the table. He told her that Corkran had been appointed second mate. The mates had not yet come below. She went to speak to George and found him stronger than he had been, bent on coming to be at table with them. She sat on Peter's right as she had been on Richard's right during these weeks of the voyage. Willie Leeper had roasted one of the geese shot that afternoon, had cooked it so thoroughly the meat fell off the bones at a touch. Peter served her and George, and as Mat Forbes joined them he served his own plate and then Mat's. When Corkran appeared, a little uncertainly, Peter heaped his plate; and he asked in an agreeable tone:

"Do you know navigation, Mr. Corkran?"

"No, sir."

"Mr. Forbes can give you a start. Better work on it." Peter smiled grimly. "The Venture's had hard luck with her officers this voyage. Something might happen to me."

"Yes, sir," Corkran assented in a toneless voice. Peter looked at him thoughtfully, but he said nothing. There was little speech during that meal.

"Dick was always a hero to me," Peter said, half to himself. "I didn't think anything could happen to him. He seemed so strong and sure, and luck was always with him. I almost went crazy, running up and down that beach today." He rose, shaking his head.

George and Mary followed him into the common room, and George lay down on the long bench there. It was still broad day in these high latitudes, but the small window gave scant light. Peter lighted the whale oil lamps.

"I don't like the dark," he said. "I'm dreading tonight. Probably won't sleep." He decided, after a moment: "I'll go on deck and have a look at her."

George lay quietly. Mary stood looking out of the small square window at the boil of water under the stern. The desk was at her left, the log book lying on the end of it.

"But don't you see, George, this means Richard isn't dead!"

After a while, she looked down at the book; and presently she lifted it and turned the pages to the latest entry. She read it, her eyes glancing along the lines.

"Hoakes Bay. Day began with southwest wind and rain. Repairs finished this morning. Captain Richard Corr and Mate Peter Corr went to shoot geese on shore while the water casks were being filled. Captain Corr descended to the south beach and tried to club a sea lion. The animal bit at him and its tusks fastened in his arm and it dragged him into the sea. He was lost. Wind came southeasterly in the afternoon, giving us a fair chance to make out of the Bay. Will stop at Stanley to set up new topmast and topgallant. Rain squalls tonight. Corkran was promoted to be second mate."

Mary read and nodded slowly. As she conned the words, she seemed to hear, far away, a faintly familiar sound, not easily identified. She tried to hear more plainly. Peter had written this. The capitals were ornate, involved in sweeping curves, and there were blotches where the pen had pressed too hard, and the letters staggered erratically up and down. Peter had written this. It was very different from the preceding entries in Richard's small, neat, careful hand. Richard's hand was compact and firm, Peter's large and sprawling. Peter had written this. What was it she seemed to hear? Something heard long ago. Or seen long ago. Peter had written this! Peter!

Her eyes widened in a sudden startled attention. Once years ago Richard had written her a note, two or three lines, brief, curt, cruel. "Wait till you grow up. Don't be a silly little fool." But Richard had written that note the way Peter had written this entry in the log, in a sprawling hand, the words straggling up and down, the capitals ornate.

Suddenly she knew in a complete and overpowering revelation that it had been Peter, not Richard, who wrote that cruel note long ago. The log book snapped shut with a sound so loud that George sat up, staring at her, asking quickly: "What is it, Mary?"

She asked in a sharp whisper: "George, what made you think Richard and I loved each other that day?"

"Don't be unhappy about that! It's all right."

"No," she insisted. "Tell me."

She demanded acutely: "George, did Peter give you a letter he said I'd written to Richard?"

YOUNG BULLS REQUIRE CARE

Good Feeding Produces Best Results.

By L. J. CASE

(Extension Animal Husbandman, N. C. State College.)

Many farmers have recently added a herd of beef cattle to their agricultural enterprises. It is highly important that they take adequate care of the herd bull, especially if the animal is young.

Young bulls should be well fed and cared for in order to grow them out properly. A good ration is equal parts of corn, crushed oats and wheat bran, and all the legume hay the animal will eat. If legume hay is not available, add about one-half pound of a protein supplement with the grain mixture. Where wheat bran is too high in price, double the amount of oats in the ration.

The total amount of grain to be fed should vary with the condition of the bull, but in no case should it be necessary to feed more than one pound to each 100 pounds live weight of the animal. Small amounts of good sweet silage may be fed to the bull, but large quantities may prove detrimental.

The young bull should have access to salt and pure water at all times, and a mineral mixture of equal parts of steamed bone meal, ground limestone, and salt should be kept where he can help himself.

The beef type bull should not be put into service until he is at least one year old. The first year he may be used on not over 10 or 12 cows, one service to the cow. The bull should have access to a well-fenced lot or pasture where he can take exercise. An open shed or shelter of some kind should be available. Some bred cows running in the same lot with the bull will induce exercise. In no case should the young bull be allowed to run with unbred females.

Rotation Grazing of Sheep Prevents Stomach Worms

Rotation grazing of sheep is the ideal preventive measure for stomach worms, believe animal pathologists of the University of Illinois college of agriculture.

Since preventive measures are based on breaking the life cycle of the worm, the young and unfested animals should not be allowed to contact the manure from infested animals. Most serious effects are seen among lambs, and since growth must be made while the animals are young, the safest pastures should be made available to the lambs.

First symptoms are dullness, lack of thrift and often diarrhea. Later the skin and mucous membranes of the eye and mouth become pale as a result of the anemia caused by the blood-sucking habits of the parasite. Swellings may appear along the lower jaw, dewlap or brisket. Stomach worms are tiny blood-sucking worms 1/2 to 1 1/4 inches long and smaller than an ordinary pin. The adult worm attaches itself to the lining of the fourth stomach and feeds for awhile, then commonly shifts to a new point of attachment, leaving a bleeding wound resembling a pin-prick. The adult female lays many eggs which pass out with the droppings and contaminate the ground. The eggs hatch in from a few hours to several days, depending upon conditions of temperature and moisture. The larvae undergo further development until they reach a stage capable of infesting the host. In this stage they are very resistant to drying and low temperature.

When the grass is wet the larvae crawl up blades of grass to be swallowed by grazing sheep. Reaching the stomach, they mature in two to three weeks and in another week or two the females are producing eggs in large numbers.

Farm Notes

American cash income from farm marketings and government payments in December amounted to $837,000,000 as compared with $801,000,000 in December of 1939.

Recent reports from Vichy say that most of the cattle in unoccupied France will soon have to be slaughtered because of a critical shortage of corn, barley, oats and other feed.

The United States produces about 30 per cent of the world's beef supply. Argentina, Brazil, and Uruguay combined produce about 25 per cent.

Some agricultural experts believe that with farm labor costs going up just as farmers are sending their sons into the draft army, there will be an increasing need for farm machinery.

Prices of ready-to-wear clothing increased 5 to 10 per cent in 1940 and are expected to rise as much more in 1941. Woolen garments and leather goods are especially likely to rise in price because of the demand for wool, hides, and leather for defense purposes.

Benefits to Our Readers

THE PUBLIC nature of advertising benefits everyone it touches. It benefits the public by describing exactly the products that are offered. It benefits employees, because the advertiser must be more fair and just than the employer who has no obligation to the public. These benefits of advertising are quite apart from the obvious benefits which advertising confers—the lower prices, the higher quality, the better service that go with advertised goods and firms.

TIPS to Gardeners

REGARDING HERBS

MANY home gardeners may be interested in growing herbs this year because of the war, and because they make everyday dishes more appetizing and flavorful.

Herbs may be grown in a plot about four by six feet to supply the average needs of a family. They should have full sunlight and be planted in good loamy soil.

Almost all popular herbs—balm, basil, borage, fennel, marjoram, rosemary, thyme, sage, anise, dill, and caraway—may either be used when young, and fresh, or prepared for use dried.

Anise, basil, borage, dill and savory are annuals; caraway, and fennel are biennials, and balm, marjoram, sage, rosemary, thyme and chives are perennials, although balm and marjoram are best treated as annuals.

All the herbs mentioned here will probably produce enough growth for use the first year, however, if seeds are planted early, and climate is normally temperate.

FIRST-AID to the AILING HOUSE

By ROGER B. WHITMAN

(© Roger B. Whitman—WNU Service.)

Effects of Condensation.

QUESTION: A house that we bought last year was freshly painted, but within two months the outside paint blistered, except on porches and other places that did not touch the inside walls. In winter, windows steam so badly that water runs down and has rotted the window casings and spoiled the paper below. Upstairs is not finished, and paint outside of upstairs does not blister. We have hot air heat and a cistern in the basement. What causes the trouble?

ANSWER: That trouble all comes from too much dampness in the air of the house. This may be from over use of the humidifier in your furnace. Another cause may be the burning of natural gas in open burners; every gas burner should be connected to a flue to carry the vapors outdoors. The cistern may also be responsible; it should have a tight cover. You can check the steaming on your windows by applying storm sash and tight weatherstrips. You should also fill the joints between window frames and outside walls with caulking compound.

Banging Steam Pipes.

QUESTION: We are annoyed by a loud banging in the steam pipes to the second floor. This occurs mainly at night when the radiators are cold, and automatic heat goes on. The house is five years old, and the owner says the noise has been present from the first. One plumber tells us that nothing can be done about it. Can you make any suggestions?

ANSWER: That banging is due to a section of the pipe that is level, or on a bank slant, instead of being slanted toward the boiler. As a result, water collects in it, and interferes with the passage of steam to the radiator. Very often raising the radiator on blocks of wood one-half inch thick, or even more, will end the trouble. Otherwise, the water-trap in the pipe must be located and straightened out.

Basement Finish.

QUESTION: My house has now been built about six months, and condensation that troubled me has now disappeared. In finishing a basement room, what can I use for the floor and walls?

ANSWER: For the walls, use cement paint of a kind intended for masonry. For the floor, the kind of dye that you name should be excellent. This will give color, but you will not be able to use rugs or mats on the floor. You should look forward to laying asphalt tiles, or a new kind of linoleum that is proof against rotting when laid on the concrete floor of a basement.

Mice in a Car.

QUESTION: How can mice be kept from gnawing holes in the upholstery of a car stored for the winter in a country garage?

ANSWER: Scatter quantities of moth balls all over the inside of the car. If the car is of the closed type, and the doors and windows are shut, the odor inside will keep any small animals from entering. If the car is open, it should be covered with canvas, building paper, or in some other way, so that the vapor of the moth balls cannot escape. It may be necessary to replenish the moth balls some time during the winter.

Poison Ivy.

QUESTION: My backyard is in a natural state, with a rocky ledge and trees. Poison ivy is growing there. How can I get rid of it?

ANSWER: In every locality you can find someone who is immune to ivy poisoning, and who can grub up the plants and get rid of them once and for all. Sprinkling the leaves with a solution of rock salt and water, with a little soap added, will make them shrivel. If this is continued, as new leaves and shoots show the roots will eventually die. Do not let this solution get on the ground, for it will kill all vegetation.

White Cast on Doors.

QUESTION: Can anything be done to restore stained doors that have a whitish cast from being wiped with a wet cloth?

ANSWER: The whitish misty cast can be removed by wiping with a mixture of 1 tablespoon of cider vinegar in a quart of water; rub this on with a soft cloth in the direction of the grain, and wipe dry. A thin coat of wax well rubbed in will protect the finish.

Hollow Sound.

QUESTION: The eight steps to my stoop are against brick walls, with one side open. When entering or leaving there is a hollow sound. How can I overcome it?

ANSWER: The space underneath is empty, so that you get the effect of a drum. If the hollow sound is a recent development, it may be because the under parts are rotting. You should investigate.

Editors Mail Box,
(NOTE: Contributions to this column are the opinions of the signed writer, and do not necessarily express the opinion or sentiment of the management.)

Dear Editor:
In regard to Mr. Eicke's letter in last week's paper, would say that when one starts out to either commend or condemn an article previously published, one should be very careful that the words are all spelled correctly, lest some reader might miss the point—not that missing the point would be any loss to the community—far from it! The sentiment Mr. Eicke tried to express, and the sentiment criticized by Mrs. Sikkenga, seem to be about on a par, and should have no place either in our public school buildings or in our newspapers.

Mrs. Sikkenga's idea of raising the standards of our town thru the education of our children is a commendable one and should be shared by every teacher and every parent of growing children.

Of course as the matter stands, there is no meaning to Mr. Eicke's criticism, and in case of further literary effort on his part, would advise that he confine himself to four-letter words with which he is probably more familiar.

Terrific Fighting Marks Nazi Thrust Into Yugoslavia and Greek Territory; British Lose Bengasi to Axis Forces But Capture Addis Ababa in Ethiopia

(EDITOR'S NOTE:—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.)
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

BALKAN DRIVE: Under Way

With Adolf Hitler's charge to "carry the war to Britain wherever she may be" ringing in their ears, the Nazi soldiers that make up his armies smashed across the frontiers of Yugoslavia and Greece.

Early reports of the fighting in the Balkans were vague, scattered, incomplete. Nazi claims indicated that their movements were on schedule. Greek sources at first claimed the Nazi heavily armored machine was bogging down.

One of the first objectives by the German forces was reached when armored troops and parachutists reported they had broken through to the Aegean sea in eastern Greece. This movement was said by military experts to cut off Greece from her potential ally, Turkey.

Even as the German troops moved toward the Yugoslavian and Greek borders announcement was made that Russia and Yugoslavia had signed a new "non-aggression" pact. British were hopeful that this was further indication of what appeared to be a trend of Soviet movement away from the Hitler sphere of influence.

In Yugoslavia before the fighting began there were last minutes moves to "placate Berlin," and a last-minute notice from Berlin that these peace overtures "came too late." But Yugoslavia apparently was standing for something far bigger and wider than her own narrow physical confines. Yugoslavia was becoming a byword for courage and daring throughout a jittery world.

Particularly was this noticeable in shaky spots like certain South American countries which saw in the sudden reversal of the Serbs, Croats and Slovenes against the government which had signed up with the Axis a sign that Nazi Germany might not have a sinecure in conquering Europe.

They saw that even in the midst of the Nazi-dominated Balkans a certain country, surrounded on four sides by enemies, could have the bravery to stand up to these enemies and to defy them, with all their superior power, to cross their rocky borders.

Not that anyone figured the Yugoslavs would be a "pushover" for the Nazis, in fact, the Nazi position was none too good, for most of the terrain held by them was hostile, and Britain, with 10 to 15 divisions of men, well provided with armored equipment and airplanes, were dug in just south of the Bulgarian border,

C. Fotitch, Yugoslav minister, leaves the White House after calling upon President Roosevelt to thank him for his message to the boy monarch of Yugoslavia, King Peter.

ready to give Yugoslavia and Greece more than lip-service if, as, and when the attack should come.

What part the United States was playing could not be said, although President Roosevelt said that lease-lend aid was being sent to "more than one country," which might include Britain and Greece, or Britain and Yugoslavia, or all three.

Just before the statement from the White House was made, however, the President had conferred with the Yugoslavian minister.

How well prepared Yugoslavia was seemed to be a moot point. Food was short, but so it was in all the Balkans—in all Europe, for that matter. The numbers of the army were large, estimated at from 1,200,000 to 1,500,000, but these figures the Battle of France showed might mean much or little.

There were many who believed that the Yugoslavs, who have the advantage of having the crucial Danube river run through a portion of their country, the part of the river which is so rapid and hemmed in by mountains that a canal bears shipping at that point, might explode huge charges of TNT in the mountainsides and render river and canal unfit for shipping for many months.

Already they had blown up many important bridges in the valley of Vardar, and had shown a grim determination to make a fight out of the Nazi invasion at all points.

BRITISH: Lose Bengasi

The evacuation of Bengasi, capital and port of Libya, was admitted by the British, who reported that the withdrawal was "according to plan" and that Gen. Sir Archibald Wavell was merely "picking his battleground" on which to meet the Nazi-reinforced Fascist troops.

Later dispatches seemed to indicate that the Australia-New Zealand army in Africa had halted the Nazi-Italian drive, for it was said that "the situation was well in hand," and the shooting down of six German planes and the damaging of two others was reported officially.

However, on the same day came war office warnings to the British public not to be surprised if there were further withdrawals, saying that it was officially doubted if the "halting" of the German-Italian advance was permanent.

Better news for the British however was the announcement that the Ethiopian capital of Addis Ababa had been taken from the Italians without a struggle. This capture came as a climax to eleven weeks of hard fighting to smash Italians African empire to bits.

IRAQ: Stages Coup

There was a military coup d'état in Iraq, historic Bagdad being the scene of a governmental overturn staged by army forces led by Rashid Ali Gailani.

The coup was viewed differently in various quarters, Bagdad itself, two days later, announcing that one of the main features of the new government would be fulfillment of all international obligations, particularly with Britain.

This is Emir Abdul Ilah, regent of Iraq, who ruled for five-year-old King Feisal II and is reported deposed and fleeing for his life after the military coup d'état.

Previously it had been hinted in dispatches from London, passed by the censor, quoting Soviet circles in London as saying that it was believed the coup d'état was inspired by the Axis, and that the objective was going to be the establishment of Nazi air bases in Iraq.

This naturally was disquieting to London, as if carried out it would place Nazi airplanes in a position of dangerous proximity to the Red Sea and the Suez canal, the defense of which had been going well for Britain.

STRIKES: Mostly CIO

The calling of a strike against the plants of "Big Steel," the United States Steel corporation, by C.I.O. unions proved that the labor situation was still acute, although the soft coal strike was settled, and the men went back to work digging the important fuel out of the ground.

Just 48 hours before the settlement was reached, four men were shot to death in Harlan, Ky., a bloody center of previous strike rioting. Just before the settlement of the bituminous coal strike, it was estimated that 530,000 men were out of work in the United States as the result of strikes, adding considerably to the number of man-days lost in the national defense.

Philip Murray, head of the C.I.O., called the strike against U. S. Steel, declaring that the companies had refused to heed a demand for a 10-cent an hour wage increase. The company has 261,000 wage earners. The C.I.O. also wants a closed shop.

The Ford strike had closed the biggest single industrial plant in the nation, employing 86,000 workers.

Its gates were marked by many scenes of violence as pickets battled with workers.

Back of these front-line scenes were back-stage battles. The Ford counsel obtained an injunction against the strikers, and the strikers promptly subpoenaed Henry Ford, Edsel Ford and Manager Bennett to appear in court.

The next move saw Ford Attorney Capizzi making a court motion that all labor board citations against the company be thrown out as the C.I.O. union was dominated by Communists.

'Social' Work

JERSEY CITY, N. J.—Grace Billotti, YWCA social worker, demonstrates the speaking pose she will use in campaigning against Mayor Frank Hague, Democratic boss and mayor of this city since 1917. In the last election, Hague received 110,700 as against the best GOP showing of 6,700, which shows what "social" work Miss Billotti is up against.

AFTERMATH: Of Seizure

The ordering back to Italy of Naval Attache Alberto Lais of the Italian legation was a sensational aftermath of the seizure in American harbors of Italian and German vessels.

The first step was the seizure of the vessels and the jailing of 875 members of the Fascist and Nazi crews. This was closely followed by the revelation in the state department that Lais would be declared "persona non grata" to the American government and that his return to Italy would be demanded.

Lais had previously described himself as more than 75 per cent American and he is married to an American woman and their handsome daughter lives with them in Washington.

But Secretary Hull's report, which gave no details, showed plainly that Lais' "25 per cent Italian" heart had prevailed on him to participate actively in the attempted sabotage of the Fascist vessels.

This, the secretary said, was an unfriendly and illegal act, and for that his recall was demanded.

Mr. Hull also revealed that the United States had sent a flat and uncompromising "No" to the Axis demand that the ships be returned and the crews released.

Yet it was not expected anything would be done with the vessels until the incident had had time to cool down.

It was not the only serious naval reverse for Italy, the British having claimed that they had practically put 11 Duce's fleet out of commission in the Mediterranean, declaring that nine vessels, including two battleships, had been sunk, besides others believed put out of action due to damages suffered in the naval battle.

CONVOY: Big Issue

The question of whether or not American naval forces should convoy war shipments to Britain was becoming very much of a moot question in congress, with indications that the anti-convoys vote would lose.

It had been confidently predicted that American naval ships would convoy shipments to Britain "at least halfway across the Atlantic." Senator Tobey, chief opponent of this plan, even during the debate of the lease-lend bill, had a bill to ban convoys slated for consideration before the senate foreign relations committee.

But a poll of the committee showed that only 8 out of 23 committeemen would support the measure.

Yet President Roosevelt said discussion of the matter, in press conferences "was premature." It still seemed, however, likely that the Tobey resolution against convoying would not be allowed to die in committee, as many members felt that a senate vote would be the only way of settling the question once and for all.

Chairman George of the committee had repeatedly said that he would not favor American convoying unless the nation was actively and formally in the war. Senator Pepper, an ardent advocate of aid to Britain, had taken the stand that other methods, giving of conveying ships to Britain, ought to be tried before convoying is resorted to.

The mere appearance of the question into the open air, however, showed that a probable campaign of preparation of the public mind for convoying was going on.

This attitude of bowing to the administration's lease-lend powers was expressed by Senator Gillette, Iowa, who said that while he did not favor convoying himself, he was unwilling to stand in the way of the President's full administration of British aid.

While the lease-lend bill states specifically that nothing in the bill can be construed as giving the President the authority to order American convoying, legal authorities in Washington said they were of the opinion that he has that power as head of the army and navy.

Capital Housing Problem Vexes District Officials

School and Water Supply Facilities Are Also Seriously Taxed by Influx of Defense Workers.

By BAUKHAGE

National Farm and Home Hour Commentator.

WNU Service, 1343 H Street N. W., Washington, D. C.

WASHINGTON.—Millions for defense but not enough sense to contribute sufficient funds to the District of Columbia budget. That is the Washington city government's present charge against congress.

The other day I sat in the office of one of the district commissioners and an army officer who had been drafted to help work out the city's housing problems, and they seemed pretty helpless.

"We haven't got the money to meet the emergency situation that is growing in the district as a result of the defense program," was the burden of their song.

Washington is run by a commission—three men—our three "mayors," if you will, appointed by the President. Our board of aldermen are the district committees of the house of representatives and the senate. The federal government bears a share of the expense of running the city—but not enough, say the citizens of the district. All they can do is "sally" for they have no vote, either locally or nationally.

The emergency is bringing thousands of new workers here. From June, 1930, to January of this year nearly 25,000 new government employees moved in. The figures for February, due to be released in a few days, are expected to show a big increase.

The Washington Board of Trade estimates that 55,000 new residents have moved into the District of Columbia in the last year.

Question of Schools.

In addition to these extra beds and baths that must be provided, there is the question of schools. The commissioner with whom I was discussing the situation, cited one example.

"Down there between Bolling field which will soon be the center of American aviation and the naval research laboratory," he said, "the federal government has built 600 family units. It will probably be increased to 1,000. These are just for the navy yard workers. Right there will probably be enough children to fill one schoolhouse alone."

A million and a quarter dollars, it is estimated, should be spent on schools alone in Washington as a result of the influx of residents. This is to say nothing of the next most pressing need—facilities to increase the water supply. The Canal Zone is not much hotter than Washington in the summer. People take a lot of showers. We have a Potomacful of water but we need more pipes and pumps.

The greatest portion of the city's expense, however, goes to taking care of the homes and the offices and people which make up the federal government.

Anyone who thinks the life of a government worker is all roses, frankincense and myrrh in these days needs only to listen to the local director of the Housing association who says:

'Doubling Up' Complaints.

"Frequent complaints of doubling up in apartments and rooming houses come to us. One bath for 15 to 20 persons is a common grievance. Three to six unrelated roomers in the parlor of a once fine private residence is not uncommon."

Very bad, say the health authorities, for sanitation. Very bad for morale, too.

And then Washington has on its periphery a number of army camps, cantonments and forts. By July the boys on leave will be flocking in from an army of nearly a hundred thousand men. Their welfare and amusement have to be taken care of, too.

The district government, therefore, is struggling with the congressional committees, attempting to convince them of Washington's needs. A bill is now being considered which would increase the proportion which the federal government contributes to the federal city, but the officials cannot bank on the money until it is in hand.

American Housewives And Vitamins

An efficient secretary laid a newspaper clipping on my desk. The same day's mail brought a letter enclosing a magazine article from a farm-woman listener.

The newspaper clipping said: "The housewives of the United States are soon to receive the most thorough education in how to feed their families ever provided by any nation in the world . . . the American housewife is going to learn a great deal about vitamin B and about all the other vitamins . . ."

I ran through the magazine article. It was written by Velma Carson 12 years ago and in it she remarked on what a misapprehension most city people have concerning the modern farm woman. The author told how a companion in a Pullman made some pitying remark about a woman they passed who was hoeing in a garden. Miss Carson said:

"I explained that quite likely the pathetic creature we recently had passed would be in a chiffon dress by afternoon, powdered with the same brand Lady What's-Her-Name has indorsed, marcelled into shining waves, and driving her car to a meeting where a professor from the state university would give latest gossip on vitamins—a subject so fascinating to farm women ever since they have discovered hidden forces in the old familiar 'greens.' As one progressive, earnest, white-haired lady said to me once after a home demonstration agent's lecture, 'Well I always fed my family on just what we had on the farm—milk, butter, eggs, cheese, and vegetables, and such. It sure was a piece of luck these things all had vitamins.'"

Flapjacks For the Navy

When the cooks of the U. S. S. Wyoming—or any other ship with a complement of 1,200 men—get their pancakes, it is quite an undertaking to provide them. Down at the navy department you can see a cook book with recipes just like any cook book—but the figures are different. I looked at the recipe for flapjacks the other day. Here it is:

Sea air makes for big appetites. A cook in the galley of the battleship U.S.S. Wyoming prepares flapjacks by the hundreds for breakfast.

120 lbs. flour	2½ lbs. shortening
10 dozen eggs	10 lbs. evaporated milk
10 lbs. sugar	70 qts. water
7½ lbs. baking powder	2½ lbs. salt

The same men who dispose of this order of cakes in one day will eat 1,500 pounds of fresh meat, 3,200 pounds of fresh vegetables, 1,300 pounds of fresh fruit and 120 dozen eggs, to say nothing of the canned goods consumed.

Bears Get 'Friendly' In National Parks

The bears in our national parks are getting too pally with tourists; so the national park service has issued a warning.

It seems that when humans begin fraternizing with a bear the bear begins to treat them as equals. This means that when a human gets between a mother bear and her offspring, ma chases him out of the way, sometimes administering a well-aimed swat in the process.

"Bear incident" is the government's name for damage to property and injuries to persons as a result of the public's disregard of rules against getting too familiar with bruin.

Moral: Don't treat bears as equals.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

NEW YORK.—If Lord Halifax has been homesick for England, he no doubt feels better after his weekend at Unionville, Chester County, Pa. There

Halifax Heard No has been American Accent saved for In Pack's Baying gesture of gracious hospitality it would seem, a tiny spot of old England as authentic as diligent effort could possibly make it. Chester county comprises the fox-hunting domain of Lord Halifax's host, W. Plunket Stewart, and so faithfully has Mr. Stewart adhered to the British tradition that Chester county is often called the Leicestershire county of America, with its hunts comparable only to the Melton, the Mowbray and the Quoin of Leicestershire—the same comprising all the superlatives of fox-hunting in England.

In 1911 Mr. Plunket—a banker when he isn't riding to hounds—began searching for the perfect hunting domain. He found it in Chester county. The terrain was sufficiently broken to give the fox a break, but open enough for some slam-bang, tallyho riding, with woods, streams, stone walls and all the required hazards and lures, without too many people to get in the way. Mr. Plunket bought a large tract and thereafter, it appeared, banking was somewhat of a sideline.

He and his brother Redmond had bred a pack of hounds and built the famous Green Springs Valley hunt, of Glyndon, Md. Hence, knowing all the ins and outs of fox-hunting, he proceeded rapidly to recreate the Leicestershire of the Eighteenth century. Gilbert E. Mather, already established in Chester county as a fox-hunter, was moving eastward in search of new territory. Mr. Stewart bought his English foxhounds and began importing others from England, along with hunters of ancient pedigree.

There is in Mr. Stewart's hunt the most careful observance of all ancient traditions of British fox-hunting, particularly in dress. The master and his staff wear scarlet, with crimson collars and the every-day dress is scarlet with crimson facings and scarlet velvet collar.

Mr. Stewart is a native of Maryland, related to European royalty. He was in the army remount service in the World War. Incidentally, the natives of Chester county have co-operated enthusiastically in the fox-hunting, and real estate values have risen.

WE'VE started leasing and lending, and the quarterback snaps the ball to Adm. Emory S. Land, chairman of the maritime com-

Adm. Land Apt to Deliver on the Atlantic Gridiron mission and "co-ordination of facilities for ocean transport," as of his recent appointment. There is historic precedent for his finding a hole in the line, weaving through a broken field and planting the ball on the other side of the goal posts.

That was in the famous "crap game" session between the Army and Navy in 1900. With less than a minute to play, "Jerry" Land, as his shipmates always called him, in the backfield for the Navy, blocked a kick and made one of those Frank Merriwell zig-zags down the field, winning, 11 to 7 for the Navy, just a few seconds before the whistle blew for the finish. Such doings are pretty much in his horoscope.

In the World War he was in the navy bureau of construction and repair and got the Navy cross for building submarines and for his work in the war zone. In 1919 he turned in the most comprehensive and searching technical study of German submarines the navy ever got, along with a study of what they might do or try to do in the next war. He retired in March, 1937, but got only a month's lay-off, as President Roosevelt got him back on the job as a member of the maritime commission. When Joseph P. Kennedy retired to become ambassador to Great Britain, Land became chairman of the commission, and within two weeks the same was shaking a leg as never before.

The admiral, a small, wiry, eager man, with a touch of the mule-skinner about him when he's driving things through, lost no time in putting to work the first congressional allotment of $400,000,000 for building our merchant marine.

He is a native of Canon City, Colo., and a cousin of Charles Lindbergh. At Annapolis, he was tops not only in football but in several other sports, and rowed the bow oar on the academy crew. He was the successful conciliator in that long-drawn-out Army and Navy athletics row of a few years ago.

STAGE-SCREEN-RADIO
By VIRGINIA VALE
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

WHEN you see "Men of Boys Town" (Spencer Tracy and Mickey Rooney), watch three very young men who have important roles; it's more than likely that, when they grow up, they'll be tops among leading men. Metro thinks so.

They are Darryl Hickman, aged eight; Bobs Watson, who's nine, and Larry Nunn, just thirteen. You probably saw Darryl as "Winfield Joad" in "Grapes of Wrath." Norman Taurog thinks he's one of the finest child actors he ever directed. Bobs has seven brothers and sisters who have film careers. Says Taurog, "Whenever I have needed a regular kid, I have found that I could depend on the Watsons." Bobs got his break because none of the other Watsons fitted the role.

As for Larry, he'd made a name for himself in radio before he tackled Hollywood, two years ago; "Strike Up the Band" was his first picture.

For more than a year there's been discussion at Warner Bros. about filming the life of George M. Cohan, and at last a deal has been arranged with the famous song and dance man. James Cagney will play the lead, probably getting to work on it some time this summer, after he returns from vacationing at his place at Martha's Vineyard, Mass. Mr. Cohan will supervise the production.

Scenario trouble has delayed work on "Babes on Broadway," in which Shirley Temple was to start her come-back, so her first picture will be "Lazybones." It's a story of the San Pedro fishing fleet, and Shirley will be seen as Wallace Beery's motherless daughter.

American people have more than a generous sense of humor; they have generous hearts as well. It's proved every Sunday on the "Double or Nothing" radio program. Walter Compton, master of ceremonies, asks each guest the name of his favorite charity; if the contestant can't answer his questions, the prize money is given to some charitable institution.

Leading figures of grand opera, the theater, the sports world and big business have tried their luck on the program, and many have given their winnings to less fortunate persons. Martha Raye and Frank Forrest, the program's popular tenor, gave theirs to the Red Cross. Lyle Talbot had a question from a woman who wanted to buy her blind son a Seeing Eye dog; he gave her his winnings, and the listening audience subscribed the remainder. Frederick Jagel of the Metropolitan Opera sent his to the Hundred Neediest Cases.

Rita Hayworth returns to her home lot, Columbia, to play opposite Fred Astaire, and dance with him in a musical, "He's My Uncle"—she's just finishing a dancing role in "Blood and Sand," with Tyrone Power. The talented Rita may be just the dancing partner needed for Astaire since he and Ginger Rogers parted company on the screen.

Penny Singleton was selected America's Number One Blonde by beauty shop owners and operators at the International Beauty Show held in New York recently. The pretty screen and radio star won out over Madeline Carroll and Alice Faye, who were runners-up; it was said that during the past year she'd done more than anyone else to make American men blonde-conscious. As "Blondie" on the screen and the air she's inspired many another young wife and mother, who've appreciated her quite as much as the men did.

For almost four years Bess Johnson has been managing the mythical orphanage around which the story of "Hilltop House" gravitated. Now the serial has come to an end, and she's to be starred in a new one, titled "The Story of Bess Johnson." Same time, same stations.

ODDS AND ENDS—While making "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" Spencer Tracy's been looking ahead to vacationing in New York with his son, Johnny. After waiting about a year, Paramount will film "Miss Susie Slagle," the popular novel. Greta Garbo is slated to go back to work May 1, in a modern American comedy. About 3,000 enthusiastic fans greeted Glen Miller, CBS band leader, when he arrived in Los Angeles; they practically mobbed him. Conrad Nagel, master of ceremonies for the CBS "Silver Theater," swore off on cigarette smoking from New Year's to St. Patrick's day—but didn't quite make it.

SOUPS FOR EVERY OCCASION...
(See Recipes Below)

SOUP'S ON!

Soups may be a substantial addition to a rather lean menu, or a distinctive touch to a dinner de luxe, for they vary all the way from the thin, clear, delicate consommés and bouillons to the hearty chowders and satisfying cream soups.

Economical, tasty, nutritious—what more could you ask of a dish so versatile? Make soup the mainstay of a family lunch or supper or the perfect beginning for a "company" dinner.

A little "dressing up" can play fairy godmother to the plainest dish—yes, even soup. Most people eat with their eyes, first of all. So, if you wish your soups to take on a party air, garnish them enticingly. Try sprinkling with buttered croutons, chopped parsley, a few grains of popcorn, toasted puffed cereals, minced chives, a dash of paprika, or a few tiny round crackers; or place a spoonful of whipped cream in the center.

For extra goodness, why not try cheese in soup? It will draw a big stamp of approval, as you will see if you try Potato Cheese Soup. Here's the recipe:

Potato Cheese Soup.
(See picture at top of column)
3 medium sized potatoes
2 cups boiling water
2 to 3 cups milk
3 tablespoons butter
½ small onion
1 teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons flour
Pepper, cayenne
1 tablespoon parsley
1 cup cheese, grated

Cook potatoes in boiling salted water until tender. Put through a strainer. Measure the liquid and add enough milk to make four cups. Scald. Melt the butter, add the finely chopped onion and simmer five minutes. Add the flour and seasonings and combine with the potato mixture. Cook three minutes and strain, if desired. Add cheese and beat until smooth. Add chopped parsley, top with buttered croutons.

Manhattan Clam Chowder.
¼ cup diced salt pork
2 cups diced potatoes
1 dry onion, diced
1 cup water
2 cups milk
1 can minced clams (about 1 cup)
Salt and pepper

Cook the diced pork and onion, stirring constantly 'til they are tender but not browned. Add the potatoes and water and simmer until the potatoes are tender. If the one cup of water is not sufficient to cover the potatoes, more should be added. When the potatoes are tender, add the milk and clams and seasonings and heat thoroughly. Serve with crisp, salted crackers.

One Dish Supper Soup.

¾ cup rice
1 cup chopped celery
2 small onions
1 green pepper
1 pint tomatoes
6 eggs
½ cup cheese
3 cups water
Salt

Add chopped celery and onions to a kettle of boiling water. Add chopped green pepper. Cook slowly 15 minutes. Add tomatoes. Just before serving, break the eggs into the hot soup. Sprinkle with cheese. Cover. Keep in warm place 5 min.

LYNN SAYS:

The water in which vegetables have been cooked, and left-over cooked vegetables may often be utilized in making excellent soups.

Minute tapioca, because of its thickening quality and attractive translucence, makes an excellent thickener.

Once thickened to the desired consistency, cream soups should be kept warm over hot water. Evaporation caused by additional cooking may make them thick and pasty.

*Recipe given.

utes. Pour over a mound of hot boiled rice placed in individual soup dishes. Yield: 6 servings.

Duchess Soup.

2 tablespoons minute tapioca
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
1 tablespoon onion, finely chopped
4 cups milk
2 tablespoons butter
½ cup grated cheese
2 tablespoons parsley, chopped

Combine dry ingredients, onion, and milk in top of double boiler. Place over rapidly boiling water, bring to scalding point (allow 5 to 7 minutes), cook 5 minutes, stirring frequently. Add remaining ingredients; cook until cheese is melted. Serves 6.

Old-Fashioned Vegetable Soup.

2 quarts soup stock (see directions)
1½ cups potatoes, diced
¼ cup celery, cut in strips
2 small onions, sliced
½ cup peas
1½ cups carrots, cut in strips
1½ cups canned tomatoes
Salt and pepper
2 tablespoons parsley finely chopped

Heat stock, add vegetables and seasonings, and cook gently until vegetables are tender. Add chopped parsley and serve. Makes 8 portions.

Cream of Onion Soup.

2 tablespoons rice
2 medium-sized onions
2 tablespoons butter
1 cup water
1 teaspoon meat extract or a bouillon cube
3 cups milk
Salt and pepper

Chop the onions and cook in the fat until slightly yellow. Add the water, rice and meat extract or bouillon cube, and cook until the rice and onions are tender. Add the milk, reheat, and season with salt and pepper. Yield: 4 cups.

Russian Borsch.

1 pound soup meat
6 cups water
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
1½ cups potatoes, large cubes
½ cup grated raw beets
1 tablespoon chopped parsley
1 large onion
1 large carrot
1 tablespoon butter
2 cups medium-chopped cabbage
1 cup beets cut in ¼-inch strips
6 tablespoons sour cream

Cover meat with water, add salt and pepper and boil for 10 minutes. Cut onion and carrot in strips and brown in butter. Add to soup and boil for 1 hour, replacing water as it boils away. Add cabbage and beet strips to soup and cook until beets are tender, about 30 minutes. Add potatoes and cook until tender, or about 15 minutes. Just before serving, add grated raw beets and pour immediately into serving dishes. Place 1 spoon of sour cream in center of each serving and sprinkle with parsley. Makes 6 servings.

Soup Stock.

3 pounds shin of beef
3 quarts cold water
Cut meat in pieces free from fat, and place in kettle. Add water, partly cover, and heat slowly to boiling point. Simmer gently five hours, removing scum as it forms. Keep meat well covered with water. Then remove meat and set broth aside to cool. Skim fat from broth. Strain liquor carefully through fine sieve or cheesecloth. Chill. This gives a clear broth, free from fat, to be used as basis for soups. Makes about 2 quarts stock.

City of Caverns

London, in these times, would be fortunate if the city were constructed as Paris is, for the French capital is built largely of stone brought from under the very ground on which it stands. Because of this, there is a ready-made underground city about one-tenth the size of Paris. One section of this cave city contains the Catacombs, where rest the bones of some six million. Another zone consists of vast layers of gypsum. The Quarry service has cut into this section tunnels which follow accurately the courses of the avenues above. Ordnance maps of this system show springs, galleries, rooms, arches, and reinforcements. Had the government of France decided to defend the city, the people could have occupied this underground fortress and defied Hitler's bombers till Doomsday.

Our Revelation

In all lives there is a formation of character. It comes from many causes, and from some which on the surface are apparently even trivial. But the result is the same; a sudden revelation to ourselves of our secret purpose and a recognition of our, perhaps long-shadowed, but now masterful, convictions.—Van Amburgh.
